Release 2 of CoreIntegrator revolutionizes content management integration

January 18, 2006, Lewisburg, PA

Computer Support Services, Inc (CSSI) announces Release 2 of its CoreIntegrator software technology. CoreIntegrator ties together sophisticated document management systems with core business software such as accounting packages, customer relationship management software, and human resources management systems. Essentially, CoreIntegrator embeds document management, making scanned documents available electronically inside of business software applications. This revolutionary middleware offers a paradigm shift in document handling.

Document management systems typically include high-speed scanners to digitize paper documents, data-extraction software (OCR) to pull information from the scanned images, and specialized software to store and retrieve the scanned images easily. CoreIntegrator glues these products together, adds a document routing capability, and makes all of it available seamlessly from inside other enterprise software applications.

A system built around CoreIntegrator can decrease data-entry time while increasing accuracy. It can speed the exchange of information throughout an organization, reduce the overhead of managing and storing paper documents, and help a company comply with government records-retention regulations. Early adopters of these technologies have recouped the costs of their investments in as little as nine months.

“The efficiency of embedded document management is astonishing,” reports Tom Erickson, Vice President of CSSI. “After you scan an invoice, a job application, or some other paper document, you can distribute it electronically for management review and approval. When you attach it to a specific entry in your accounting, customer relationship management, or human resources management software, authorized employees can review the document without leaving their desks. Companies can reduce headcount, speed business processes, and save money.”

Success with GP<sup>X</sup>, CSSI’s integration of document management into Microsoft Dynamics GP Accounting (Great Plains), inspired the company to develop CoreIntegrator.
